Incretin Update: New evidence for use of a proven class

Nearly a decade has passed since the incretin class of diabetes pharmacotherapy was introduced in Canada, but a lot is changing. Guideline updates, cardiovascular data, new agents—are you keeping up?

Stay up to date by joining us for an interactive event. Recognize the incretin class' place in therapy, evaluate the latest long-term GLP-1 receptor agonist and DPP-4 inhibitor cardiovascular data, and differentiate between these agents.

After attending this session, participants will be able to:

- Recognize the importance of individualizing management of type 2 diabetes
- Interpret the updated interim 2015 CDA guidelines on the pharmacologic management of type 2 diabetes
- Review the physiology, efficacy and safety of DPP-4 inhibitors and GLP-1 receptor agonists
- Evaluate the most recent data from long-term cardiovascular outcome trials of incretin therapies
